'Flying High' Spirits Soar

This was the year for Roger Williams College to see their students 'flying high' with enthusiasm and school spirit. The expansion of Roger Williams, both physically and academically, is giving it's student body an inspiration to participate in making campus life better adapted to the the desires of the students. In early fall President Rizzini spoke to the Student Senate and voiced his desier to have RWC become a graduate college. September opened with a bang as students gathered for a barbeque where friends rejoined and freshman were met by welcoming faces. New dorms, overlooking Mt. Hope Bay, were opened, witnessing the expansion of RWC.

Splashing around in Mt. Hope Bay are Dave Doolan and Johnny Bravo. Water games were a big part of the early fall and springtime weekend fun. RWC students were often found down on the beach.

Drinking beer at this private party are Erik Seaverson, Joel Hahr, Steve Makouski, Paul Lussier, John Wallace, and John Bowlin. Just look at those happy, glowing faces.

While watching out for her friend, Sue Preefer enjoys the relaxing fall time weather.

After dinner, students can be found lounging around in their 'sweats' doing homework or just talking.

Dorm I girls Lynda Rettman, Debbie Saviano, and Debbie Powers are found doing this.

Coughing down that Balzanos' pizza is the way that Doug Carlson, "Tonto," and Anil Paatel,

"Indian," take care of the after-party munchies. Balzanos was often called upon to relieve those gnawing, "empty" stomachs of many Roger Williams College students.

"The hustle-bustle" of dormitory hallways makes it hard for Virginia Franqui to speak.

Students often enjoy the company of friends as they walk across campus. The sidewalk between the cafeteria and the dorms became a freeway during dining and class hours.

yearbook. The Hawk could be found at the winter sports games helping to cheer on our teams with the RWC cheerleaders. Freshman quite often asked "Who's in that hawk outfit?" But no one knows Trying to find something buried down under her stereo, is Katherine Hawk. Students quite often misplaced things during the year, but by spring time everything started to show up.

Humanities teacher, Mr. Szner cheers on the RWC faculty in a basketball game against Bristol F.D.

Spirit Sweeps On

The junior-senior classes held many new and different fundraisers. Mr. and Mrs. RWC, a talent show, and pre-spring weekend events were just a few of the spectacular events. The sophomore class held outstanding jello-wrestling contests. A large variety of costumes were displayed at the wild Halloween Bash at Glen Manor Mansion. The Rec. Building proved it's success as it held many of the large events, and the weight room has become a popular place for the jocks to sweat. Meanwhile, the Theatre Arts Dept. has been putting their artistic talent to use restoring an old barn for future use as an art studio.

New England College Hockey Conference champions, NAIA District V champions, and 4th in NIAA National Ice Hockey championship is our own RWC hockey team. Hector Massa presents the trophies to college.

A romantic moment between Mark Marianaccio and Megan O'Boyle is captured by a peeking photographer.

Taking a drive across campus in an open jeep are Amy Alterman, Tim Guay, Julie Yorks, Susie Kessler, Sherri Grande, and Maria Barow. Car pools were often the way to go to McDonald's and Burger King.

Sitting on the famous Student Union brick wall was popular during the early fall and spring afternoons.

Dave Perrelli, Jeff Dziedzic, Brian Buchanan, Tom Waurishuk, and Ed Morely find time to sit on the wall and catch some rays, while talking about their weekend plans.

Taking time out during their lunch hour to pass the word on any new interesting info are JoAnn Kucharski and Mark Porter. The snack-bar was a popular place at lunch time.

Playing cards and drinking beer are in the 'cards' for Jeff Cowlings and Doug Delozier's weekend entertainment. Drinking card games became a big part of the weekends for many parties.

A fall afternoon football game leaves Ken Seiss and David Jackson covered in mud.

Balloons Let Loose

Upon return from Christmas break, the friendly local bars welcomed the return of RWC students with special college nights. The Student Senate has been busy with meetings and has gained a new electronic information board, telecasted from Texas. St. Patrick's Day was spent in nearby Newport as students watched the parade and joyously fulfilled the Irish tradition. As the weather broke for the return of spring our athletes could be seen playing softball and frisbee. The new Lacrosse club added much life to the school spirit. On sunny days students were seen all over campus rejoicing the return of warm weather by sunning themselves and listening to tunes.

Seniors Dave Perrelli and Lisa Kaeding 'check out' the Health Fair that the Dean of Students Office sponsored. The fair centered around physical fitness, weight control, hair care and styling, and substance abuse. These were some of the more popular areas that attracted students.

Gathering At Different Places

Hanging out at the Rat, these students take time out from their busy schedules to gather around and strike up conversation. The Rat was often used for students to relax with friends.

Hey look, a letter! Larry Kutler and Dave Caron are happy to receive a little mail.

After a long day, Pat Delaney takes a break from work just to "hang" out.

Discussing matters in the Student Union, Greg Jones and other members of the band "Exchange," plan for their next set in the Rat.

Many discussions took place in the Student Union among friends.

Bold glares are thrown forth from the eyes of these seductive faces. Under these disguises, Kolleen Rinaldi, Lynn Guerrier, Marcia Gannon, and Stephanie Lemberg are ready to hit that Glen Manor Mansion party with full force. Many other original costumes were spotted at this Halloween bash.

Appearing In Many Places

Anxiously waiting for dinner, RWC students form hurried lines into the cafe as the cafeteria staff quickly fills the plates of these hungry students. There were often long lines to get into the cafeteria, especially, on the nights when special dinners were served.

Relaxing between work loads, this student rests in the comforts of a bean-bag chair.

Students often retreated to their rooms between or after busy class schedules.

Fulfilling work study duty, this RWC student is busy washing up dishes in the cafeteria

Cafeteria Talk

Friendly students absorb the sun and a little laughter between daily classes.

Munching out in the cafeteria, Stephanie Lemberg and friends laugh over a few of the days events. After dinner was a popular time for RWC students to reflect the days happenings.

Boy, those hockey team members can really stash some food before a game or after a practice! Looks like this student isn't so sure about swallowing that mouthful. Wonder what was for dinner?

Perfecting their strategic Karate shots, this student and coach go for a round.

Are those girls about to go overboard? Better hold onto those drinks a little tighter.

Friends really partied it up on the Booze Cruise sponsored by the ski club.

This cruise was a very successful event for the ski club.

Sunglasses Set Trend

That sun must be pretty strong today. I can recognize Chris O'Connor under those fancy new shades. It looks as if another trend is being set at Roger Williams College. Pretty "incognito."

Fancy sunglasses are just one of the new styles that students will be sporting on campus.

Sunny afternoons were perfect for studying down on the rocks near Mt. Hope Bay.

Checking identification at the entrance to the Rat, these students seem to be having a good time.

Expert wall painting was spotted in Dorm I, Unit 2. This student really has a flame for talent.

Painting on the walls and doors was a part of the artistic development of RWC students.

Pastel colors were a part of this year's fashion.

Sunglasses could be found everywhere, even in a restaurant.

Galloping pitcher pourer, Larry Kutler, helps serve for the Student Life Office's first annual medieval banquet held in the Rathskellar. Students dined on assorted "medieval" foods and wines while getting a feel for life in the days of medieval times.

They Came In Yellow Suits

Attending breakfast in their pajamas, Bill Evans, Heather Thompson and friends charged through the raging storms for a bite to eat. Most students remained snowbound.

Trudging through the drifts of snow, Scott MacKracken attempts to reach solid ground.

Quiet winter months were broken by the weirdly dressed attenders of the medieval banquet.

Coming to the rescue, the Roger Williams College physical plant crew, armed with shovels and heavy rain gear, prepared to dig the students out of their dorms and shovel paths through the snow.

Entertainment Entertains RWC

Cheering on the Roger Williams College soccer team during their exciting game against Western New England College, are these loyal and true fans

Filling drafts kept the concession stand busy.

Picking a winner from the raffle bucket at the Todd Hobin band concert, are Michelle and Carl.

"Where's the dog?" was a question often asked to these models.

Setting up for concerts in the Rec. Building meant lugging alot of kegs

Spring Weekend Fever Hits

Sitting back and resting with a cooler full of beer, was a common sight during Spring Weekend.

Playing the drums and keeping the beat going during the afternoon concerts during Spring Weekend is Roger Williams own Tony Scima from the Exchange.

Cooking hamburgers was not just for the cafe staff, but also students.

Rocking with the bands under the big tent, entertained many students.

Rollerskating around campus was part of the excitement during Sunday of Spring Weekend.

Flying high was part of this band's performance.

Evening concerts in the gym entertained many.

Flying kites were a familiar part of Spring Weekend. Dave and Mike show off their kite.

Serving hot dogs to the starving crowds was an all day task.

People, coolers, frisbees, kites, and blankets, covered campus

Fever Keeps Sweeping On

Lying in the grass with the day's leftover beer bottles, etc., was the way that everyone can remember how Spring Weekend '84 ended.

Drinking, partying, and sunning, was all a part of enjoying this long awaited weekend.

Dorms Expand

Payphones in the dorm hallways received much use.

Dorm buddies celebrate with a few beers. Private parties were often secretly kept in dorm rooms.

On warm sunny days, friends flooded out of dorms to enjoy the weather. Here, a few high flying balloons and a little champagne toast the day.

Checking out the bay in front of Dorm III, these students have found a great place to hangout.

Sneaking into dorm rooms during wee hours of the morning, friends can still be seen talking.

New Sports Sweep Campus

Tugging on the rope for Unit 1 is anchor man and resident assistant, Edward Travers. Battle of the Dorms' event continued through the day.

New sports swept over RWC's campus. Hassaki was one that dorm students loved best.

RESIDENCE HALL I: Unit 1 residents. Resident Assistant was junior Edward Travers III.

RESIDENCE HALL I: Unit 2 residents. Resident Assistant was Mark Marinaccio.

Partying outside the dorms was a part of the sunny, Friday afternoons at RWC.

Socializing And Studying Join

Studying in the library, was quite often a time when friends could help each other with their classwork. Couples were often found in the corners.

RESIDENCE HALL I: Unit 3 residents. Resident Assistant was senior Michelle Schoenfeld.

RESIDENCE HALL I: Unit 4 residents. Resident Assistant was senior Craig Orent.

RESIDENCE HALL I: Unit 5 residents. Resident Assistant was Jeanne Silag.

RESIDENCE HALL I: Unit 6 residents. Resident Assistant was Scott Rehbein.

'Oldies' Are Still Favorites

Playing pinball down in the gameroom in the Student Union building, was a favorite past time for residents. It was a great way to relax.

Stuffed animals were popular with the girls. They made good friends.

RESIDENCE HALL I: Unit 8 Residents. Resident Assistant was Brian Cronin.

RESIDENCE HALL I: Unit 9 residents. Resident Assistant was Anthony Coppola.

On sunny afternoons between classes residents could be found hanging out by dorms.

Students Make Own Entertainment

Hanging out on the steps of Unit I, playing their guitars are Scot Coar and Jim Glabicky. Resident musicians often combined their talents.

Deck Proves Handy

Relaxing in a hammock outside of Unit 12 this student takes in some tunes and rays along with some Dannon Yogurt.

Attached to Unit 12 was the famous deck. It looks like it was a good place to party.

RESIDENCE HALL I: Unit 11 residents. Resident Assistant was Joyce Ibbotson

RESIDENCE HALL I: Unit 12 residents. Resident Assistant was senior Tracey Heunemann.

Chatting with a friend helps to kill this students boring afternoon.

Boredom Is Conquered

Hassaki was a popular new past time this year at RWC. Jon Mitchell and his friends were often seen playing this game, even while drinking a beer.

RESIDENCE HALL II: 2nd Floor South residents. Resident Assistants were Mary Stavast and Jody Smith.

RESIDENCE HALL II: 3rd Floor South residents. Resident Assistants were Sarkis Sarkisian and Mike Patrie.

RESIDENCE HALL II: 3rd Floor North residents. Resident Assistants were Julie Galin and Brian Buchanan.

RESIDENCE HALL II: 4th Floor South residents. Resident Assistants were Dave Montgomery and Carol Marocco.

Caution Is Needed

Aiming carefully before he takes his shot in this RWC student. Crowds often gathered around the pool tables to watch a match.

Even though he might have a broken leg, it does not stop him from having fun.

RESIDENCE HALL II: 5th Floor residents. Fifth floor residents were often called the "temporaries."

Units 1 and 3 ended the year with a cookout. RA's Ed Travers and Michelle Schoenfeld did the cooking.

Talking to a friend about their plans for the evening is Joyce Ibbotson.

Rathskellar Is A Refuge

Enjoying a few mug fulls of beer at the Rathskellar are resident assistants Pat Boland and Brian Cronin.

Hanging Out In Dorm III

Relaxing and talking with a friend on a cloudy Saturday afternoon, is Dorm III resident Leslie. Conversations helped kill long afternoons.

Taking a break from her studies to talk with some friends is Lynn Guerrieri.

RESIDENCE HALL III: Unit 322 residents. Resident Assistant was senior Rob Cady Jr.

RESIDENCE HALL III: Unit 323 residents. Resident Assistant was senior Andrea Smith.

Highlighting important facts in one of his books is student Pat Bolland.

Dorm III Needs A Union

Playing electronic hockey down in the Student Union helped pass weeknights for Dorm III, building three resident students.

RESIDENCE HALL III: Unit 342 residents. Resident Assistant was senior Cathy Pickett.

RESIDENCE HALL III: Building 6 residents. This building was one of the townhouses in Dorm III.

Pedaling his way through the obstacle course is a bit hard for those long legs on that small tricycle.

Enjoying 'Happy Hour' at Gillary's, are freshmen Rebecca Kilb, Sue Hanley, and Tim Eddy.

Friday Means Gillary's

Going up for the volley for his team during the volleyball tournament of the Battle of the Dorms is sophomore Mark Mulone.

Partying it up with Busch Beer on the senior class cruise, is Derrick and friend.

Florida Festival was the place to be for Spring Break '84 for Donna, Beth, and Tracey.

Cruising on a friend's boat down off the coast of Florida is enjoyed by Beth and Michelle Schoenfeld.

Gathering in groups on campus between class was a frequent sight on nice days.

Playing softball against different dorm teams was the way late afternoons were spent this spring semester. All enjoyed playing and watching.

Visiting Friends

Visiting some of his girl friends, he finds amusement playing with the stuffed pig. Many guys on campus had "fun" playing with stuffed animals.

Goofing around outside of their dorm, these students find fun in the afternoon

Talking with a friend, Jessie tells about all of her adventures throughout the past day.

Clapping, singing, and rocking the night away is the Todd Hobin band.

Celebrating And Celebrating

Enjoying some of her last days at Roger Williams College and in Rhode Island, Sue Hanley walks the shores of Colt State Park.

Celebrating a birthday with a bottle of champagne are Paul Elliott, Linda Hannigan, and Mike Masulo.

Celebrating Christmas in somewhat of a western fashion, is sophomore Kolleen Rinaldi.

Celebrating the end of the '83-'84 school year at Roger Williams College are Units 1 and 3 residents

This time it's Michelle Schoenfeld and Tracey Heunemann enjoying their friends boat down in Florida.

RWC In Florida?

Taking advantage of the nice, cool springtime weather, are Kathy Hawk and Edward Travers. Studying outside was a nice break from inside.

Organizing the stage in the Rec. Building for the band is Carl VanDassel.

Having fun at an outside party in Ft. Lauderdale, Florida, are Dawn Morrison and Mary Beth Geary.

Having an evening popcorn party on one of their beds, are these Dorm I resident students.

Spinning records on the senior class cruise, is WROG's own Tom Halish.

Popcorn Parties Galore

Enjoying an evening in the comfort of her room in Unit 3 of Dorm I. Some students enjoyed just staying in their own instead of the Rat.

Dance Students Fly

Concentration and agility are needed to be a successful dance student. The dance performance was a success for the dance theatre department.

Performing the "Vortex" at the Health Fair, are the talented and healthy dance students

Some students found that most of their time was spent at the studios. This is the AIA Architecture club.

Other students found that they were spending most of their time meeting deadlines. The Messenger staff.

Trying out for Mr. RWC, senior Brian Cronin is being asked questions by Jodi Gleckman.

New Clubs Emerge

Partiers really booze it up on the Ski club sponsored "Booze Cruise." Looks like these guys are getting tipsy. Hope they don't fall overboard!

Typing away is Senate secretary, Chris Panepinto

Flicking that frisbee, members of the club better their expertise and get a little exercise.

Checking out the sites, Ski club members at Sugarloaf/USA are eager to hit the slopes.

Senate Hires Attorney

"I make a motion to . . ." "I second . . .," "The motion is so moved." These are just a few of the phrases that can be heard bursting from within the doors of the Student Senate office during meetings. Student Senate members can often be found in the office either catching up on work or helping students. The Student Senate works to create a representative form of student government by providing a means for responsible and effective student participation in organizations and control of student opinions as matters affecting students; providing mutual and beneficial understanding with faculty and administration; furthering student welfare, maintaining academic freedom and responsibility, maintaining student rights and enhancing educational, social, and cultural opportunities. The Senate offered, for the first time, prepaid legal services by Chuck Lonardo, Attorney at Law. Many RWC students took advantage of this great opportunity.

Now, for the less serious side of the Student Senate. RWC students were snowbound in the "Flurry '84" events put on by the Student Senate in the first Annual Winter Carnival. Other events of the weekend were a "Nut-n-Screw" party, sponsored by the senior class, a "Puck Party" after the hockey tournament, and a Jello-Wrestling contest. Clubs and organizations assembled in the Recreational Building with displays and contests. There were clowns, balloons, and a pie-eating contest. The Student Senate has been busy leading Student affairs and getting involved with the clubs.

EXECUTIVE BOARD: Robert Cady Jr., Parliamentarian; Cornelius Peterson, Treasurer, Stephen Cardi, President, Chris Panepinto, Secretary, and Earnest Panciera, Vice-President.

While selling balloons at the Winter Carnival, Denise Alften and Mark Paterson take time out to chat and look around at the other events that were taking place in the Recreational Building.

Attending a Senate meeting. Gina Clark listens to a treasury report.

Discussing parliamentary procedures, former Vice-President Ed Fox and Vice-President Earnest Panciera concentrate on the facts that run the student government. Many students questioned members of the Student Senate about government procedures. The Senate was very helpful to students.

Social Committee Rocks

Beaver Brown, Miriah, and Beau Bolero were among the bands that rocked RWC through many nights; shaking the walls with blasting tunes. The Social Committee had a very eventful year producing a constant stream of activities to keep the students engrossed in merriment. The committee contracted many bands and at least once a month a band played, filling the Recreational Building and Cafeteria with music. Other bands that played were Maurice Raymond and the Lonely Boys, who played music by the Rolling Stones with perfected Mick Jagger imitations, The Fools, and Todd Hobin. The Social Committee also held Campus Skates, where students rented roller-skates and skated the night away in the Rec. Building. They helped the senior class put on the Steak-n-Brew dinner complete with music and dancing. The committee also contracted the band for the Commencement Ball.

With beers in hand, Roger Williams College students listen intently to the band The Fools! Many bands played in the Recreational Building and in the cafeteria. These bands attracted large crowds.

Enjoying a few beers in the cafeteria, friends gather to talk and listen to music. Entertainment captured the attention of students looking for an evening to spend around on campus.

Co-directors, Carl Vandasel and Michelle Lupo, run the Social Committee.

Unaware of the action of partying friends behind him, Mark Mulone remains calm to pose for his picture. Unexpected pranks between friends keep students amused and always on the go.

Answering the phone, Carl Vandasel gives matters a quick thought before responding to the question. Students always called or visited the Social Committee office to ask questions or make suggestions. Bands and events really kept members of the Social Committee running.

Committee Attends Conventions

As Roger Williams College expands, the need for social activities increases. Creative people and new ideas are important to producing successful events. The Social Committee is a member of the National Association of Campus Activities. They attended the regional convention in New York and the national convention in Nashville, Tennessee. Here, the committee received many new ideas and have been able to put on new events. Every month, the Social Committee produces and distributes an events calendar to keep students aware of activities. Members of the committee hold office hours in the Senate office daily. Here, they are open to suggestions from students and may be asked for assistance for an event. This has been a busy year for the Social Committee.

Blasting tunes, the lead singer from Beaver Brown rocked with RWC students. Beaver Brown was one of our most popular bands. This adds to the success they got from the movie "Eddie and the Cruisers".

Playing at RWC, Miriah, with lead singer and lead guitarist, blast songs out to the audience. Students filled the cafeteria to dance and rock out to the sounds of Miriah.

"What is this about a weekend in spring?", "Who are the bands?", "When do tickets go on sale?" All this commotion must mean one thing ... Spring Weekend! The Social Committee has done it again, conjuring up all those spectacular and fulfilled events. The weekend started off with a couple of new Eddie Murphy movies. The big bands were Stevie Ray Vaughan and David Johansen, just blowing the campus away with sound performance. Both Saturday and Sunday there were barbeques enhanced by music from local bands, Miriah, The Name, and Look Daggers. Students flooded the campus with the partying spirit. Fiddler the Clown was spotted all over campus adding to the fun and laughter! Spring Weekend is the main event of the year that the Social Committee presents, and oh, what a weekend it was.

The band Miriah takes a quick pose for hungry photographers. This was one of the many successful bands that were contracted by the Social Committee. We saw more of this great band during Spring Weekend. Miriah played frequently at the Village Tavern where many students went to hear them play.

Yearbook Staff Flying High

This years new Editor-n-Chief, Rebecca Kilb, was 'flying high' with new ideas for the Talisman. After looking through previous books, she commented, "A yearbook isn't just pictures, it's pictures along with copy and graphic designs, brought together to create a more appealing book to all students." The staff worked with a representative from Hunter Publishing Company to create goals such as: better layouts, more organization throughout the book, better theme development and addition of more copy in order to produce a book that is more catching to the eye. Rebecca and staff worked long hours as deadline time approached. Mark Mulone was often hidden in the darkroom developing film and printing pictures as Derrick LaRue tediously designed the artwork. All were pleased with the final product.

The Aldeberon is a literary magazine published here at Roger Williams College. It is published entirely by student control. Students in this literary magazine club get an inside look at the process of magazine publishing. The editors are John Hirschak and John Flynn, assisted by faculty advisor Geoff Clark. This is a high quality literary magazine.

Students waited eagerly for each new issue of the Messenger. The Messenger updated students with political, academic, and social happenings on campus. Editor-n-Chief, Whit Hill, and Associate Editor, Jill Green, along with staff put many hours of hard work into the production of this newspaper.

Answering the phone in the Yearbook office is, senior and yearbook staff artist, Derrick LaRue. Derrick spent mornings in the office answering the telephone and answering any questions people brought in.

Art designer for the Talisman yearbook, Derrick LaRue worked hard on completing designs for the book. Expressing a larger need of artwork was just one of the goals set by this years yearbook staff.

Yearbook Editor-n-Chief, Rebecca Kilb, crops photographs for a layout.

Editor-n-Chief of the Messenger, Whit Hill, leans back and takes a break from the hard work that members of the Messenger have to put in to make this newspaper a success.

New Money Makers

SENIOR CLASS OFFICERS: Front row: President, Philip Longo; and Vice-President, Sue Hall. Back row: Laurie Campbell, and Joe Mogelnicki. All worked hard and did a good job for their class.

Selling tickets for the senior sponsored annual Steak-n-Brew dinner are Chris Thumm, Sue Hall and Dennis Ring. The dinner was part of the St. Patrick's Day tradition. It was held in the cafeteria. Special guests were "Fire and Ice" who presented music for after dinner dancing.

JUNIOR CLASS OFFICERS: Treasurer, Mary Stavast; Vice-President, Chris O'Connor; President, William Sprulli; and Secretary, Sarah Desmond. All enjoyed being officers and looked forward to being seniors.

Playing pool at the local bars is part of the weeknight entertainment for seniors Rusty Budlong, John Patrick, and Pam Ward. Arcade games and fuz-bol accompanied pool as the popular games played by college students to pass the time by. These games were even better over a beer . . . or two.

Hard Work Makes Success

Modeling his famous act as a nerd, sophomore Jody Smith takes a shot at Mr. RWC in the contest sponsored by the junior class. Many students displayed their talents in the contest.

Winner of Mr. RWC, Mike Laucella goes under erious questioning by Jodi Gleckman.

Decked out in that tennis outfit, Jill Green, winner of Mrs. RWC, really shows off her talent.

Best friends partying it up at the "50 Days Till Graduation" party held at "Your Place or Mine." The senior class had a count down calendar starting at one hundred days till graduation. Many parties were held by the seniors to help them count down those final days!

Dance Makes A Hit

The Business club had a very active year. They started off the fall with a 'Welcome RWC Party' at Gillary's. Members of the Business club ran the Oddz-n-Endz store. This gave students practical experience in management and working with people. The senior members of the club took a trip to Boston to attend the American Marketing Association convention. The Business Club also sponsored a Valentine's Day dance with music by a disc-jockey from UConn. This was a huge success. They also sold carnations for Valentine's Day, that were delivered by the members.

Enjoying dinner during a trip to Boston, seniors, Heather Thompson, Neil Peterson, Joe Correnty, Pamela DelRusso, and Guy Picciuro enjoy a few laughs together.

Frisbees Fly High

WINDSURFING CLUB MEMBERS. President of the club this year was senior Chris Hoyt.

SAILING CLUB MEMBERS. President of the club was senior Timothy Clerbe. All enjoyed sailing.

Playing frisbee, Richard Beckman and team mate race for the catch

Being able to throw that frisbee with accuracy, concentration and aim is needed.

President of the windsurfing club, Chris Hoyt, displays photographs of windsurfers at the Open House. Clubs set up displays and booths during Open House to give information to upcoming freshman. These booths also conveyed school interest and school spirit.

Riders Take Flight Over Fences

The Equestrian club attracted many members that were eager to start riding. Funding was limited so the club held many fund-raisers, they included the pie-eating contest and candy cane messages were sold at Christmas time. The money was used to cover lesson expenses. Meanwhile, the Equestrian team was busy defeating Johnson and Wales College in an intercollegiate dressage show that put a silver tray in the RWC trophy case. The team and club also held an exhibition on the front lawn of Roger Williams College campus for the Open House in April.

Enthusiasm and spirit really set the tennis club off to a great start. The club had seventeen members that really put a lot of effort into working together. The club had three matches this fall and one was a state tournament. They also had an interteam tournament.

Approaching a fence, rider Drew Ravitz contemplates his actions with much seriousness. Equestrian team members performed an exhibition on the RWC front lawn for Open House in April.

Smiles from Equestrian team members show off the pleasure they had during their exhibition. The team had a very successful show during Open House and hope to have attracted upcoming freshman. Great advances were made by the Equestrian club and team this year. The future looks good.

Lacrosse Spirits Soar

Was that a lacrosse stick I saw, 'flying high' through the air with a ball of enthusiasm? Yes! A new club on campus this year was the lacrosse club. The first season attracted twenty-seven players, and under Coach Jim Veleca they perfected their strategies and built spirit. This spirit was conveyed to the spectators that crowded the sidelines to watch the games. The group started off as a club so they would be funded by the Student Senate. Meanwhile, the club has been working hard to reach their goals of becoming a varsity sport in a couple of seasons and doubling their game schedule. Well, it looks as if another club is off on its feet with an enthusiastic outlook.

In action, the Lacrosse club shows off their developing strategies and determination. The Lacrosse Club, a new club this year, is really on the move to creating a varsity team.

Behind that mask, a Lacrosse player anticipates the next move that the opponent will take. Lacrosse, being a new sport to Roger Williams, took an outrageous amount of team loyalty to spend the time that was needed in developing and practicing the techniques needed to play successfully.

Slopes Prove Daring

Joking on the ski slope, Renee Ettleman, Bill Sullivan, and Lisa Johnson begin to lose a little balance. This was one of many trips that were taken by the ski club during the winter months.

These are a few of the Roger Williams College students that were members of the ski club. These members enjoyed taking off to the mountains for the weekend, for an energetic ski or to relax with friends.

Getting boots to fit was always hard.

Friends gathered as boisterous crewmen aboard the Prudence II for the "Booze Cruise" sponsored by the Ski club. This was a very successful event and everyone had an excellent time.

Preparing to hit the slopes as soon as possible, the ski club rushed off the bus and gathered their equipment. A little while later students could be seen gliding down the slopes with speed and enthusiasm. Many ski trips gave members a chance to break for the weekend and have some fun.

Cheers Liven Crowd

Spirit and vitality was spread throughout the games by the cheer-leading squad. There were five members that cheered on the Basketball team. The squad made up two new cheers, "Beat It" and "Shake Your Groove Thing" that were done to music. The girls used pom-poms. Tina Moretti, a four year member, commented, "It was alot of work, but a lot of fun!" The squad cheers from the end of August until early March. These girls really spread that team spirit!

RWC Chorale put on the "Many Moods of Christmas" performance at the St. Mary's concert. They also attended a chorale festival at Brown University in Providence, R.I. The president of the club, Elaine Simard, and Vice-President, Lori Jones, believe that performances are really beginning to improve and that the members are looking forward to them.

Spirited cheerleaders, Tina Moretti, and squad learned new cheers that were done to music.

Performing at St. Mary's Church, Roger Williams Chorale hits its final note to end a successful evening.

CHEERLEADERS: Front row: Kim McDermott, Tina Moretti, President. Back row: Robin Bristol, Captain; Kathy Wiley, and Maureen Lynch, Treasurer.

Developing Talent

Practicing her part in the play, Lisa Jo Thomas, Drama club member, listens to pointers from her director. The Drama club put on many performances this year and were very successful.

SYCHOLOGY CLUB MEMBERS. The "Psych" club as it was often referred to, was a newly formed club this year. They sponsored many fundraisers through out the year, one of which they raffled off a T.V.

Dragons Take Over

The East Bay Dungeons and Dragons Society held their Second Annual Medieval Banquet. Club members dressed up in medieval costumes and served food. A performance was done by a magician. The club can be recognized by their T-shirts. At Open House they sold unicorn and wizard posters. Their trips included King Richard's Renaissance Fair and the John Higgin's Armory.

The Paralegal club held many lectures with guest speakers from the Senate House in Providence. The club also took a trip to the Capitol Building. The purpose of the club is to familiarize it's members with the many different aspects involved in paralegalism and to help them in deciding which aspect they actually want to become involved in.

PARALEGAL CLUB MEMBERS. The club sponsored several events this year.

INSTITUTE OF ELECTRICAL & ELECTRONIC ENGINEERS MEMBERS. President was senior Chris Rlyot.

Dedication

'He Cared About Students'

Sometimes it takes a startling event before we realize how much someone really means to us. But that is not the case here.

Peter Grimo came to Roger Williams College eight years ago, when he became a custodian for Residence Hall I. He was a custodian for three years, when afterwards, he moved up to become a member of the maintenance crew.

Pete, as he was often called, did several renovations for the college. He was responsible for the renovation of the snack bar, gameroom, and Rathskellar. Pete was not just helpful at Roger Williams College, but he was also a very active volunteer in the town of Bristol, Rhode Island.

Words that come to mind when describing Peter Grimo are helpful, conscientious, and that he cared about the students. These characteristics are what made Pete a very special person to everyone.

Therefore the Talisman staff of '84 would like to dedicate this book to Peter Grimo for the love, care, and helpfulness that he gave to all here at Roger Williams College.

Deciding just how to attack that piece of pizza, Heather Thompson takes a deep breath before the plunge. Those times that dinner in the cafeteria wasn't substantial, students rang Balzono's to be saved by a pizza.

Dishing out cash to the snackbar cashier, Gary Sorkin prepares to sit down and munch out on a good lunch. Students often retreated to the Snackbar located in the Student Union for lunch or snacks.

Contemplating how one more pitcher would taste, Michael Breen tosses a glance across the table to friends for a little help in his decision. It looks as if they have decided on just "one" more.

Turning around so that their picture can be taken, are senior Jim Cormier and his date.

Bouquets of flowers topped off gowns.

Enjoying the champagne and the aura of this exciting evening, Commencement Ball '84.

The Aura Of the Night

Could it be that the senior class president Phil Longo, is going to try to perform with the band at the Commencement Ball? Go to it Phil!

Discussing plans for their special, last, senior weekend, are Pam DelRusso and some of her friends.

Even a cast doesn't stop Tim from enjoying.

Flowers, Gowns, and Tuxes

Telling stories over dinner and drinks, is senior Peter Bramente. If one listened to some of these stories they would find them quite amusing.

This bunch of friends pose for a picture.

Flowers, gowns tuxes, a few drinks, and entertaining each other, was all a part of the ball.

Special moments of happiness are shared by these two seniors as they toast to an end and a beginning

Putting on a corsage was a definite must to know for all of the senior males.

A toast to the year from Phil Long

The Day Is Here At Last

These seniors look extremely happy.

In line to receive their diplomas, these seniors patiently await for the big moment.

Already seated are these seniors. Waiting for their other classmates so that the ceremony can begin, was quite nerve racking.

Bottles of champagne were passed along as seniors, now alumni, received their diplomas.

Class president, Phil Longo, gives his speech.

Big brother has graduated, both seem happy.

After it's all over these two graduates pose one last time together at Roger Williams College.

Don't you think these students look nervous and excited? Well, you're certainly right, they are.

And They Are Graduates

Graduation day is topped off for this graduate with a flower corsage and pretty smile.

Getting ready to line up for procession

All of these soon to be graduates of Roger Williams College look awfully excited, happy cheerful, and nervous. These were majority feelings.

Spirits Fly On . . .

Enjoying the shore of beautiful Colt State Park in Bristol, Rhode Island, are these two seniors. Colt State was a place where spirits flew high.

Dancing the last dance at the Commencement Ball, Karen Boudrut's thoughts fly high.

Goofing around for the last time.
